

REPORT: Provided by Judy & Nelson Horn

WHAT IS FORECLOSURE?

It is an unfortunate commentary, but when economic activity declines and housing activity decreases more real property enters the foreclosure process. High interest rates and creative financing arrangements also are contributing factors.

When prices are rapidly accelerating during a real estate “bonanza,” many people go to any lengths available to get into the market through investments in vacation homes, rental housing and “trading up” to more expensive properties. In some cases, this results in the taking on of high interest rate payments and second, third and even fourth deeds of trust. Many buyers anticipate that interest rates will drop and home prices will continue to escalate. Neither may occur, and borrowers may be faced with large “balloon” payments becoming due. When payments cannot be met, the foreclosure process looms on the horizon.

In the foreclosure process, one thing should be kept in mind: as a general rule, a lender would rather receive payments than receive a home due to a foreclosure. Lenders are not in the business of selling real estate and will often try to accommodate property owners who are having payment problems. The best plan is to contact the lender before payment problems arise. If monthly payments are too hefty, it may be that a lender will be able to make some alternative payment arrangements until the owner’s financial situation improves.

Let’s say, however, that a property owner has missed payments and has not made any alternate arrangements with the lender. In this case, the lender may decide to begin the foreclosure process. Under such circumstances, the lender, whether a bank, savings and loan or private party, will request that the trustee, often a title company, file a notice of default with the county recorder’s office. A copy of the notice is mailed to the property owner.

If the default is due to a balloon payment not being made when due, the lender can require full payment on the entire outstanding loan as the only way to cure the default. If the default is not cured, the lender may direct the trustee to sell the property at a public sale.

In cases of public sale, a notice of sale must be published in a local newspaper and posted in a public place, usually the courthouse, for three consecutive weeks. Once the notice of sale has been recorded, the property owner has until five days prior to the published sale date to bring the loan current. If the owner cures the default by making up the payments, and paying the foreclosure costs, the deed of trust will be reinstated and regular monthly payments will continue as before. After this time, it may still be possible for the property owner to work out a postponement on the sale with the lender. However, if no postponement is reached, the property goes “on the block”. At the sale, buyers must pay the amount of their bid in cash, cashier’s check or other instrument acceptable to the trustee. Lender may “credit bid” up to the amount of the obligation being foreclosed upon.

With the recent attention given to foreclosure, there also has been corresponding interest in buying foreclosed properties. However, caveat emptor: buyers beware. Foreclosed properties are very likely to be burdened with overdue taxes, liens and clouded titles. A buyer should do his or her homework before purchasing foreclosure properties. Title insurance may or may not be available following a foreclosure sale and various exceptions may be included in any title insurance policy issued to a buyer of a foreclosed property.

We believe this information to be accurate, however, consult an attorney before you even consider any foreclosure action.

For prompt, courteous, professional service, call Judy and Nelson Horn:

Judy Direct: 760-285-5077

Nelson Direct: 760-285-5097

Visit our web sites at: www.JudyandNelson.com

Have questions, need advice you can count on or just want to discuss this further?
Don't waste any more time; pick up the phone and call us now! We are here to help!

We appreciate you as a client and a friend, your business, your loyalty, trust and your referrals. It is our goal to provide the very best counsel, advice and service possible for your real estate needs. If we may ever be of assistance to you, a relative, friend or co-worker please don't hesitate to call us. We look forward to the opportunity to serve you.TM